July deals on Pembrokeshire cottage retreats for Irish families

London, 12th June 2010: Irish families looking to take advantage of a week of quiet beaches this July should head to Celtic Haven cottage resort in Pembrokeshire from the 10th July 2010. As schools in Britain do not break up for the summer holidays until a week later than most Irish schools, families can look forward to a peaceful break on the popular Pembrokeshire coastline.

Set within the outstanding scenery of Pembrokeshire National Park, Celtic Haven is a luxury self-catering cottage resort ideally located just 30 minutes from Pembroke Port and less than an hour from Fishguard. Both ports benefit from regular services from Rosslare with Irish Ferries and Stena Line.

The resort currently has good availability for the week of the 10th July 2010 with weekly rates for a family of four starting from €1,200, or just €900 for a four-night break in a two bedroom cottage.

Celtic Haven comprises 23 self-catering cottages in total, from traditional oak-beamed properties with fixtures dating back to the 12th century, to the more recent raised courtyard of 10 properties that offer breathtaking views over Lydstep Bay and Caldey Island. All properties are equipped to luxury standard with full kitchens, including dishwasher and washing machine, CD stereo, TV, video/DVD player and central heating.

The resort also boasts West Wales' only Elemis Premier Spa, Waves Italian bar & restaurant and a leisure club with swimming pool, hot-tub, fitness suite, all weather tennis courts, a nine-hole headland golf course and a golf academy. A children's adventure zone is also set up on site and daily activities are organised for children and adults alike throughout the summer.
