

Earn plenty of dough as Immigration New Zealand rolls out job opportunities for pastry chefs

August 8 2011: There's nothing flaky about the new job opportunities available for Brits looking to move to New Zealand – SKYCITY Auckland, the country's largest entertainment group, is looking for European trained pastry chefs who want to take their career to the next level.

SKYCITY Auckland has the country's largest pastry kitchen operation, and employs some of the most experienced pastry chefs in New Zealand, many with awards to their names. The company is now seeking passionate and creative pastry chefs with exceptional experience to join the busy team and is keen to hear from any British or European chefs who are looking for a new challenge and a new life in New Zealand.

Jobs are located in SKYCITY's various dining and entertainment outlets in Auckland – including the iconic 'Sky Tower', which rises 328 metres above New Zealand's busiest city.

Applicants will need experience working in a busy restaurant, patisserie or hotel environment, competency with food safety standards, experience in both production and product finishing, the ability to work with and lead a high performing team as well as a commitment to producing a high product standard. Anyone interested in applying for the position should visit www.skycitycareers.co.nz for more details.

Visas are available through Immigration New Zealand for qualified pastry chefs with a job offer from SKYCITY, subject only to the usual health and character checks. More information about visa options and conditions can be found on: www.newzealandnow.govt.nz

Auckland continues to be one of the most popular cities for Brits relocating to New Zealand and the city ranked fourth in the 2010 Mercer Quality of Living Survey, which lists the best cities to live in worldwide.
